

Description

An organic and 100% natural mulch, coco husk chips are made from coconut shells (husk) and are a highly sustainable alternative to other mulch options. Exceptionally durable, coco husk chips are able to withstand inclement weather, and because they break down at a more measured and even rate, they are a more efficient alternative to other bark chips. High quality coco husk chips absorb water and retain it, before releasing it slowly over time. Allowing for better aeration and water flow to plants, coco husk chips are the perfect growing medium for soilless plants, such as orchids, and for use as landscaping mulch. For the ultimate growing medium, coco husk chips are often mixed with cocopeat to provide plants with better aeration.

Used by professional growers the world over, our coco husk chips are a reliable, sustainable and affordable growing medium.

- Extremely versatile, coco husk chips can fulfil a variety of growing needs, both at an amateur and professional level
- With a balanced pH, low natural salt content and minimal odor, coco husk chips are the ideal medium for nurturing all plants
- Mixing well with soil, coco husk chips are ideal for home gardening and professional growing
- Robust and easy to store
- Coco husk chips are incredibly durable, and will last a long time even when exposed to inclement weather and natural wear-and-tear.
- Excellent choice for orchids, bromeliads, kalanchoe and other plants that require aeration